

Afternoon of Christianity

Church and Theology for a Post-Secular Age

A Templeton Colloquium at the NDIAS

November 16-17, 2015 * 104 McKenna Hall

Led by Tomáš Halík, 2014 Templeton Prize Laureate
Fall 2015 Templeton Fellow at the NDIAS
Professor of Philosophy, Charles University in Prague

Participants Include:

William Barbieri, Catholic University of America
William Cavanaugh, DePaul University
Colby Dickinson, Loyola University Chicago
Brad S. Gregory, University of Notre Dame
David Bentley Hart, University of Notre Dame
Jeffrey K. McDonough, Harvard University
Anna Bonta Moreland, Villanova University
Cyril O'Regan, University of Notre Dame
Daniel Philpott, University of Notre Dame
Gerard Powers, University of Notre Dame
Philip J. Rossi, Marquette University

Monday, November 16

9:00 to 10:15 am — Introduction: The Afternoon of Christianity
10:45 am to 12:30 pm — Secularization: Divorce Between Christianity and Religion?
2:30 to 4:15 pm — Return of Religion as Threat: Is the Contemporary Political Theology a Sufficient Answer to Religious Fundamentalism and Extremism?

Tuesday, November 17

8:30 to 10:15 am — Return of Religion as Opportunity: "Anatheism" and Post-Modern Philosophy and Theology
10:45 am to 12:30 pm — The Kenotic Church Open for Seekers: The Need for Change in Ecclesiology, Spirituality, and Pastoral Theology and Practice
2:30 to 4:15 pm — Conclusions and Closing Discussion

For more information, visit our website: ndias.nd.edu.

This event is made possible with generous funding from the
JOHN TEMPLETON FOUNDATION
SUPPORTING SCIENCE ~ INVESTING IN THE BIG QUESTIONS

Notre Dame Institute for ADVANCED STUDY